

LABOR DAY TODAY AND BEYOND

The California Employment Development Department is observing Labor Day this year with its “Today and Beyond” educational campaign, which focuses on jobs in demand today, as well as jobs that are expected to be in demand in the years ahead. Along with each regional breakdown of jobs in demand, we have included median wage information, education requirements, common skills employers look for, and a Toolbox for Job Seekers that helps to make job searches a little easier.

Jobs in the Central Coast Region – Today and Beyond

Even in this challenging economy, advertised job ads are on the rise in many areas. The following table highlights examples of occupations with the largest number of job ads in the Central Coast Region (Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties) as compared to the same 120-day period from the previous year.¹ The online job ads were extracted from The Conference Board Help Wanted OnLine™ (HWOL) data series, which compiles, analyzes, and categorizes job ads from numerous online job boards,² including CalJOBSSM (www.caljobs.ca.gov), California's Internet job listing system.

Santa Cruz County saw the largest job ads increase in this region at 24.2 percent as compared to the same 120-day period from the previous year. By comparison, California's year-over increase for all occupations was 9.2 percent. Monterey County saw a 0.6 percent decrease in job ads for the year-over comparison; however, bright spots in Monterey County, as measured by the highest number of current job ads, include physical therapists, registered nurses, and retail salespersons. The following table arrays in-demand occupations alphabetically within three educational levels and highlights noteworthy totals.

Common Skills and Work Activities⁷

Even with a variety of occupations and education requirements, the foundation skills needed by in-demand occupations are often the same. These include critical thinking, listening, monitoring, reading comprehension, and speaking. In addition to common skills, there are also many shared work activities among these occupations. These include the following:

- Getting Information - Observing, receiving, and obtaining information from all relevant sources.
- Communicating with Supervisors, Peers, and Subordinates - Providing information to supervisors, coworkers, and subordinates by telephone, in written form, e-mail, or in person.
- Making Decisions and Solving Problems - Analyzing information and evaluating results to choose the best solution and solve problems.

⁴ Total openings reflect the sum of new jobs and jobs vacated statewide. Local data are not available.

⁵ The median is the point at which half of the workers earn more and half earn less. Wages do not reflect self-employment.

⁷ U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Information Network \(O*NET\) at www.onetonline.org.

- Identifying Objects, Actions, and Events - Identifying information by categorizing, estimating, recognizing differences or similarities, and detecting changes in circumstances or events.
- Establishing and Maintaining Interpersonal Relationships - Developing constructive and cooperative working relationships with others, and maintaining them over time.
- Updating and Using Relevant Knowledge - Keeping up-to-date technically and applying new knowledge to the job.
- Organizing, Planning, and Prioritizing Work - Developing specific goals and plans to prioritize, organize, and accomplish the work.

Jobs Coming Up, Jobs Coming Back

A few new occupations are appearing on California's horizon to meet the changing needs of businesses. Other jobs, once extinct or in decline, are making a comeback, sometimes with a modern twist.

Scrum Master

Out of the computer software industry comes the scrum master. "Scrum" is a growing method of project management borrowing its name from rugby, where the coach teaches team members to be flexible, self-directed, and work on the fly in order to reach the goal. Scrum masters not only coach but also serve as buffers to run interference between the production team and any distracting influence. It is time and project management – with cleats. California saw more than 3,000 advertised job ads for scrum masters during the past year.⁸ A bachelor's degree is usually required, as well as considerable experience with project management. Short-term training for scrum masters is available in California and online.

Gold Miner

One of the most prominent blue-collar figures in California's labor history, the gold miner has re-emerged on the job market due to a significant rise in gold prices. However, unlike their Forty-Niner brethren, these modern miners eschew the individualized pickaxe and panning method and instead work on large-scale mining operations as blasters, equipment operators, safety forepersons, or extractors in processing facilities. Those interested in gold mining and willing to go to school can study geology in order to become specialists in identifying potential mines and pinpointing useful deposits.

Customer Service Representative

Just as gold miners are re-emerging on the California scene, customer service representatives are making a return appearance as well. Because of higher costs and quality issues in foreign lands, companies are beginning to move their call centers back to California and the U.S. It is not only the customer service representative occupation that will benefit from call centers returning to the U.S.—companies will also need to hire managers, information technology (IT) staff, and others. Customer service representative jobs are often entry-level positions with on-the-job training. Those interested in this type of work should have good communication, telephone, and computer skills.
